Conducting Leadership

A Leadership Program from Music of the Baroque

What do a conductor of an orchestra and a leader of an organization have in common?

It turns out — a lot!

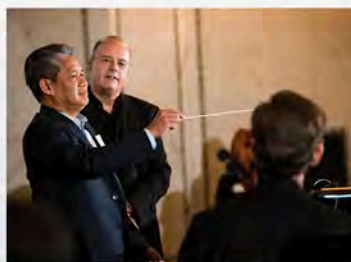

"Like a conductor, most CEOs don't make the actual product, but they are charged with having a vision. The more compelling, persuasive, and passionate their vision, the more inspired their work force and customers."

-Dr. Stephen Alltop,
conductor and presenter

BUILDING BETTER LEADERS

In this very unique 1-hour program, your organization's leadership team will be seated within the Music of the Baroque Orchestra. Participants will feel the vibrations from the sounds of the instruments and experience up close how the conductor leads the musicians.

YOU GET TO CONDUCT

Some of the participants will be invited to conduct the orchestra as part of the workshop. This program was created for executive education programs in the Kellogg School of Management and serves as a fun and insightful leadership development experience for the participants.
